Gary McManus of the Oklahoma Climatological Survey looks back at February and the climatological winter (Dec.-February, 7th coolest for Oklahoma)

Comments: 0

Posted by Bryan Painter on March 1, 2010 at 10:52 am

From Gary McManus of the Oklahoma Climatological Survey:

Preliminary numbers from the Oklahoma Mesonet for February indicate that the average statewide temperature was 35.4 degrees, 6.3 degrees below normal and the 14th coolest February since 1895. The precipitation total is a bit more tricky since the frozen precipitation we saw at the end of January partially registered on the February totals as it melted.

However, Mother Nature doesn't care as much about those arbitrary endpoints as we do, so look to the winter totals for a more accurate total. With that being said, the statewide average precipitation total was 2.61 inches, 0.85 inches above normal to rank as the 19th wettest February on record.

The lowest temperature recorded by the Mesonet during February was 7 degrees at Hooker on the 23rd. The highest temperature was 66 degrees at Butler on the 18th. Idabel led the way with 6.62 inches of precipitation and Alva brought up the rear with 0.91 inches.

Oklahoma City finished the month with an average temperature of 36.6 degrees, 5.7 degrees below normal. The precipitation total stood at 2.47 inches, 0.91 inches above normal. Oklahoma City measured 1.5 inches of snow during February. The highest temperature of the month was 62 degrees on the 18th and the lowest was 20 degrees on the ninth.

"Winter"

The climatological winter (December-February) numbers show that Oklahoma experienced its 7th coolest and 40th wettest winter on record. The statewide average temperature was 34.7 degrees, 4.1 degrees below normal. The statewide average precipitation total was 5.53 inches, 0.30 inches above normal.

All was not equal when it came to precipitation, however. Northern Oklahoma didn't share in the moist bounty that southern Oklahoma received. North central Oklahoma had a deficit of 1.28 inches and an average total of 2.17 inches, the 32nd driest February on record for that area. Southwestern Oklahoma had a surplus of 1.76 inches and an average total of 7.76 inches, the 17th wettest such period on record in that section of the state.

The high temperature in Oklahoma City this winter was 70 degrees on December 13. The other
